We learned that nationalism was one of the causes of World War I. Our textbook says nationalism is "pride a deep devotion to one's nation." People from certain areas felt they were superior to those from other countries and this made them more willing to fight over disagreements. But nationalism doesn't necessarily have to be seen as a bad thing. It can be a uniting factor, motivating people within a country to get along and work to accomplish goals that would improve the country.
Do you think that nationalism today is more of a good thing, or a bad thing? Why? Explain.
